OFFICIAL INFORMAL

Dear Bill:

You will recall that during my recent visit to Bonn, I mentioned briefly a discussion I had had with Karl Weber in Frankfurt concerning the resurgence of Project 63. Karl indicated that at the time he talked to me, there were approximately 127 cases being processed, and that the principal emphasis was now being placed on technicians rather than on academic people as in the past.

Following my return to Washington, I have discussed this matter with Joe Koepfli and we thought it best to write and ask you whether there are any indications that the present version of 63 is producing any of the bad results that the initial operation developed. If, after talking it over with Weber, you both feel that there are unfavorable reactions, we would appreciate having as much information, and where possible as much documentation as you can gather. We would also welcome any recommendations you might make as to how best to correct the situation even to the extent of discontinuing the operation if justifying circumstances can be supplied.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

J. W. Joyce
